ALL IN A DAYS WORK Our August meeting turned out to be a profitable one. With about 50 members present, the LA Chapter accomplished quite a bit towards making our Festival of Fruit '04 a memorable experience for all of us. Some of the topics touched on were registration fees, speakers, field trips, sale of tee shirts, reception and meals. We especially want to thank Roger and Shirley Meyers for coming up from Orange County and volunteering to help organize the field trips. Thanks to all of you who brought the delicious dishes for our pot luck lunch-and to the Valdivias for hosting the meeting and the wonderful tour Ed gave us.

“Jahns Prairie” Gooseberry

A selection of Ribes oxycanthoides L. cv. Jahns Prairie was recently named and released by a cooperative effort of the United States Department of Agriculture. This plant is disease resistant and produces a high quality, dark red, dessert gooseberries. The species is native in the northern prairies of the U. S. and Canada. Cuttings were propagated, grown and field evaluated as RIB 139 from 1991 to the present. The cultivar is named in memory of Dr. Jahn, who was the first curator for the National clonal Germplasm Repository in Corvallis, Oregon.

JAHNS PRAIRIE blooms in mid-April to early May. The flowers are inconspicuous, 1.0 centimeters long, 1-2 flowers per node, with a light green bell-shaped hypanthium and pinkish sepals that reflex upon maturing. The globose green fruit turns red-pink upon ripening (3.8 grams per berry) from mid to late July. The fresh fruit quality is equivalent to European gooseberries.

Genetic material of this release is deposited in the National Plant Germplasm System where it will be available for research purposes, including development and commercialization of new cultivars. Limited quantities of JAHNS PRAIRIE CUTTINGS are available from: Kim Hummer, Curator, USDA-ARS National Clonal Germplasm Repository, 33447 Peoria Road, Corvallis, OR 97333-2521. These plants are not for commercial sale.

(This is an excerpt from an article found at the UCCE Farm Advisors website)

We are now at the stage where we should be planning in earnest for the Festival of Fruit 2004. We have a number of people who have volunteered to “pick up the ball and run with it.” I note at the meeting (hosted by Edgar and Pat Valdivia) that a number of you were either reticent to offer services, or wanted to assure everyone that you were willing to serve, but not lead. The critical issue from my perspective is to not only having adequate participation, but that those of us involved enjoy the experience.

I think we all appreciate that CRFG is a volunteer organization, and some of us have more time (retired) than others (working). The key issues are redundancy and honesty. By redundancy, I mean lots of people willing to assist at whatever level they can. This requires an honest assessment of time available, and of course planning to allow adequate notice so that vacancies can be filled. Clearly, issues arise, emergencies happen, and we all appreciate that. This is why it is critical, that anyone who can make himself or herself available do so. Who knows, you might even have fun, learn something new, and find a new friend.

It should also be noted that we are soliciting volunteers from a number of chapters. This again is consistent with the notion that the Festival is a CRFG event, and we (LA) are merely organizing it in 2004. Let's make this the best Festival of Fruit ever, and provide a challenge for 2005. If we do our job, this should be a memorable experience for all. With a little luck, the 2005 event will be even better than the 2004.

Lynn Maxson and I (mostly Lynn) have made great strides in organizing the community aspect of the Festival. This will include open Dave Wilson Fruit tasting, tours of the DW planting near the Cal Poly store, demonstrations of tools, soil management and testing, grafting, etc. If you have an interest in participating in this aspect, please contact Lynn.

As I mentioned at the meeting, I am making a diligent effort to get a food preparation track going. I have been negotiating with the chef (Joszepp) who presented at Santa Barbara, as well as several other candidate organizations. Any ideas, or interest in participating in this area -contact Larry.

Thank you in advance for your participation.

Larry Mallach
